Susan, Patrick and Larry,

Region 6 has received an inquiry from a reporter with E&E News on an enforcement action that the State of New Mexico is taking to hold DOD responsible for PFAS contamination from Cannon and Holloman Air Force bases. The reporter is claiming that EPA is not supporting New Mexico in this enforcement effort and asks if this runs counter to the new enforcement partnerships policy.

Hi, a source provided me with a copy of New Mexico Environment Secretary James Kenney's July 2 letter to David Gray, the Environmental Protection Agency's regional administrator for the South Central U.S., asking the agency to support New Mexico regarding its PFAS litigation and remediation. We plan to run a story about the dispute this afternoon.

How has EPA responded to the letter and the concerns the state raised? Why has the agency apparently not fulfilled the promises Administrator Wheeler made to Sen. Tom Udall about the lawsuit and cleanup effort? To what extent does EPA's alleged inaction here run counter to its new enforcement policy, which says the agency will "may take the lead in a case where the state does not have the equipment, resources, or expertise necessary to enforce an aspect of an authorized statutory program" or in cases involving "a federally owned or operated facility?"

Please get back to me with any additional information and comments by noon.

PFAS GROUNDWATER CONTAMINATION CANNON AFB—CLOVIS, NM

BACKGROUND:

- Per- and polyfluoroalkyl substances (PFAS) are a group of chemicals used since the 1940s and found in many consumer products. Certain PFAS have been used in large volumes as Aqueous Film Forming Foam for fighting petroleum fires.
- EPA issued a lifetime health advisory (HA) number of 70 ng/l (or 70 ppt) as the cumulative screening level for PFOA/PFOS in drinking water in May 2016.
- A Site Inspection Report (August 2018) documented the presence of PFAS in groundwater, soil, sediment and surface water at Cannon AFB. If residential wells were impacted above the EPA HA, bottled water was provided.
- PFAS detected in the agricultural supply water of two dairies and in the milk from cows at one dairy, prompted the owner to discard 15,000 gallons of milk each day. The dairy farmers are seeking financial relief through USDA's Livestock Indemnity Program.
- The two dairies have filed notices of intent to sue under RCRA 7003 for imminent and substantial endangerment pursuant to the citizen suit provision. They are asking the Air Force (AF) to prevent the contaminated groundwater from reaching their property.

KEY POINTS:

Ex. 5 Deliberative Process (DP)

TALKING POINTS:

- The EPA issued a comprehensive nationwide PFAS action plan in February.
- The EPA continues to monitor the PFAS contamination at Cannon Air Force Base.
- The EPA is aware of the lawsuit between Air Force and New Mexico over the scope of the Cannon Air Force Base RCRA Corrective Action permit and Air Force's assertion of sovereign immunity.

Susan, Patrick and Larry,

Region 6 has received an inquiry from a reporter with E&E News on an enforcement action that the State of New Mexico is taking to hold DOD responsible for PFAS contamination from Cannon and Holloman Air Force bases. The reporter is claiming that EPA is not supporting New Mexico in this enforcement effort and asks if this runs counter to the new enforcement partnerships policy.

Subject: Request for comment on PFAS enforcement

Hi, a source provided me with a copy of New Mexico Environment Secretary James Kenney's July 2 letter to David Gray, the Environmental Protection Agency's regional administrator for the South Central U.S., asking the agency to support New Mexico regarding its PFAS litigation and remediation. We plan to run a story about the dispute this afternoon.

How has EPA responded to the letter and the concerns the state raised? Why has the agency apparently not fulfilled the promises Administrator Wheeler made to Sen. Tom Udall about the lawsuit and cleanup effort? To what extent does EPA's alleged inaction here run counter to its new enforcement policy, which says the agency will "may take the lead in a case where the state does not have the equipment, resources, or expertise necessary to enforce an aspect of an authorized statutory program" or in cases involving "a federally owned or operated facility?"

Please get back to me with any additional information and comments by noon.

Hi David and Patrick,
I wanted to share with you an outcome of the Senate Appropriations hearing that occurred this morning. Administrator Wheeler committed to Senator Udall that EPA would technically and legally support our Department in the enforcement of the PFAS contamination at Cannon and Holloman AFB (see this link to launch the video and forward to the 1:59:09 mark). Administrator Wheeler also committed to Senator Udall to assist the Environment Department in a manner in which that preserves confidentiality between our organizations. I'd like to set up a call between EPA, the Environment Department and the New Mexico Attorney General to discuss legal and technical assistance from EPA. I assume we should work through Cheryl and would be happy to do so if that is what you recommend. Please advise and we'll get something scheduled asap.

We can also discuss briefly at ECOS next week.

Thank you,

Let me know who is the lead for OGC, and what you'd advise. Jim Payne, Karin Leff, and I are happy to discuss further, if that would be helpful.

Thanks.

Good morning Secretary Kenney,

Confirming receipt of your note and we will follow up shortly. I've watched the testimony by the Administrator in response to Senator Udall's questions. My initial thought would have us bring in ORC/OGC also. I've copied Patricia Welton in our ORC office.

Hi David and Patrick,

I wanted to share with you an outcome of the Senate Appropriations hearing that occurred this morning. Administrator Wheeler committed to Senator Udall that EPA would technically and legally support our Department in the enforcement of the PFAS contamination at Cannon and Holloman AFB (see this link to launch the video and forward to the 1:59:09 mark). Administrator Wheeler also committed to Senator Udall to assist the Environment Department in a manner in which that preserves confidentiality between our organizations. I'd like to set up a call between EPA, the Environment Department and the New Mexico Attorney General to discuss legal and technical assistance from EPA. I assume we should work through Cheryl and would be happy to do so if that is what you recommend. Please advise and we'll get something scheduled asap.

We can also discuss briefly at ECOS next week.

Thank you,
